Shell Renewable Race Fuel is 100% renewable race fuel.	The Renewable Race Fuel is blended from components derived from bio-waste that meet the renewable fuel definition in the Renewable Fuel Standard. The definition for renewable fuel can be found here: eCFR :: 40 CFR Part 80 Subpart M -- Renewable Fuel Standard .
Shell Renewable Race Fuel provides a 60% race-fuel greenhouse gas emissions reduction compared to fossil-based gasoline.	Reduction in life-cycle greenhouse gas emissions relative to 2005 average gasoline baseline as defined in the Renewable Fuel Standard. Estimations for Shell fuel based on values provided by supplier and published fuel pathways in the California Low Carbon Fuel Standard.

Firestone used a synthetic rubber with ISCC+ certified circular butadiene in the Indy 500-specific race tire in 2023.	Tires incorporated ISCC Plus certified circular butadiene, a monomer derived from hard-to-recycle plastics, allocated using the International Sustainability &amp; Carbon Certification (ISCC) mass balance approach. The circular monomer derived from hard-to-recycle plastics replaced a percentage of the petroleum-based monomer historically used in the tires.
In the US Gulf of Mexico, Shell's oil production is one of the lowest greenhouse gas intensities in the world when compared with other oil and gas producing members of the International Association of Oil &amp; Gas Producers (IOGP).	NOIA Report: GHG Emission Intensity of Crude Oil and Condensate Production - NOIA The above link will direct you to a website that is not controlled by Shell plc or any member of the Shell Group.
